Fonetică şi dialectologie [Phonetics and Dialectology] is an academic journal founded in 1958 by the Philology Department of the Romanian Academy.

Currently it is published on an annual basis, amounting to an average of 300 pages per issue.

Fonetică şi dialectologie, XXXI/2012, indexed in ERIH-NAT (http://www.esf.org/publications/humanities.html), publishes papers developed at the Romanian Academy’s “Iorgu Iordan – Al. Rosetti” Institute of Linguistics and also similar papers developed by other Romanian or foreign scientists. The journal publishes original papers, preferably in Romanian, but we also accept articles in English, French, German or Italian.

We publish works in: descriptive and historical phonetics and phonology, Romanian, Romance and European dialectology, geolinguistics, sociolinguistics, ethnolinguistics. The journal also includes research on Romanian spoken inside Romania and abroad, especially at dialectological level. Apart from articles, Fonetică şi dialectologie publishes reviews of recent works, bibliographical notes and information on the national and international conferences. Each article written in Romanian is followed by an abstract in a foreign language. The editors will focus largely on the originality of the results. All manuscripts (approx. 250 pages) have been assessed and only the high-quality ones have been accepted for publishing.